Paradise Community Theatre

has been a very significant year for Smalltown Community Theatre. The 92th anniversary season has included 52 free performances featuring a wide variety of talent. Everything from the Imperial Russian Ballet to the musical stylings of Jimmy Buffet has graced the Smalltown Stage this year, with an array of attractions in between, including the The Metropolitan Opera, the Lerner and Lowe Musicals Society, the Band Perry, and a never to be forgotten performance by the one and only Justin Timberlake.
The variety and scope is nothing new for Smalltown Community Theatre, it was created with cultural excellence in mind.

Many performing arts organizations have longstanding ties to the 92-year-old proscenium stage. The Boston Pop Symphony performed at the theatre for the first time in 1940. The Summer Symphony series has been held annually since 1943. The New York City Ballet has been pleasing Smalltown Community Theatre audiences since 1971, the annual Shakespeare Festival began in 1974 and the Grand Ole Opry celebrated its 28th sesason at Smalltown this year. On any given weekend, you will find blues, classical, or jazz performances or festivals on the Smalltown stage.
